“ Our Dad was a stubborn Swede. He was also a Marine, which should tell you something. He and our Audrey fought his leukemia together for 17 years. When the hospice workers (who are WONDERFUL!), in the last month of his life, suggested getting a hospital bed in their home, he said, "No. Not going to do that." When they said they would be glad to come and help him shower every day (which Audrey always did), he said, "No. We don't need that." When they suggested Depends, he just said "No."

Our Dad died peacefully at home in his recliner, just-showered and dressed in fresh clothes, just like every day of his life, just like Audrey had seen to every single day that he had needed her help.

No hospital bed. He never needed that. Just like he said. We love you, Dad and Audrey. It will always be the two of you!
