“ Cheri,
We miss you so much already! Now is your time to soar high dear one, the pain is gone, fly free and high Cheri, and thank you for watching over all of us that are missing and loving you.

Until we see each other again, we love you!

PS: Please give dad and Mrs. Minor an extra hug from me!

Cheryl Allen,

*You will be missed but not forgotten by us here on earth.
You will be joining your parents, grandparents, aunts, uncles and cousins all of whom love you and will be welcoming you.
You fought hard to prove a point to everyone near and far that Cancer was not welcome.*

Until we all meet again.

*Love,
Michael Allen*

It seems strange writing this. In 2001 I was with the Liberty Parachute Team at the Vegas airshow. One of the big differences between the Thunderbirds and the Blue Angels was that every airshow we did over a 22 year span the Thunderbirds crew would come find me and ask if they could help us recover our 2000 sq ft American flag and other assistance. You were the first person that I encountered from the team at that show. There was just something about you that stood out. We spent a lot of time talking during any downtime we had. By the end of the first practice day I was determined to get to know you better. You told me about your recent recurrence of cancer. You were so open about your condition even though we had just met. Over the next few years we talked on and off and saw each other at more shows. In about 2007 we lost touch due to our military obligations me in the Army you in the AF. I tried to find you again a few times with no luck. Then a few days ago I was planning for another airshow. I was like I wonder where Cheryl is today. To my dismay this obituary is what I found. It's crazy but I have been thinking about our conversations and meet up at shows ever since. I'm sure your picture is now burned in my head thinking about good times. I only wish I had never lost touch. You will be forever missed and have a spot in my memories.

*If any of your family see this and want to get in touch it would be nice hearing from them
