“ To the man I called Dad,
You weren't my step-dad, you were the man who stepped in and became my Dad. Thank you!
I thank God for the time I was able to spend with you. I am forever grateful for the love and tenderness you showed me. Thank you for always treating me like a lady with such respect and love. You walked me down the aisle at my wedding and told me I was a beautiful bride. You whispered in my ear your going to be an amazing wife. You always had an encouraging word or left a sweet little note telling me how much you cared. You told me how proud of me you were and said you wished I was your daughter and that you never thought of me like I wasn't, and I believed you! You were there for me in so many milestones in my life. You gave me a huge graduation party that was epic. You took me to my first rodeo. You created in me a love for country music, cowboy hats, boots and line dancing. You packed me up for college and accepted me when I came home early (with no condemnation) only open arms. I cherish the long hard talks about your father and the struggles we shared. Thank you for confiding in me. I miss your hugs! I miss your smile and your amazing laugh! If only I could see you perform your signature dance move “the sprinkler” just one more time. I'm thankful you accepted Jesus and told me He was your Lord and Savior. I'm grateful for the long talks about the Bible and what you believed. I know you are in Heaven now looking down on me thank you for always protecting, loving, and encouraging me even when I messed up. You will always be my dad Jeff Hughes, thank you for loving me unconditionally. I remember how you lived your life, you had a soft heart and cried and the drop of a hat, you never knew a stranger, you helped your neighbor, and you loved well. May you have love, rest and peace now in the arms of Jesus.
I love you Dad, love your daughter, Teandra.
