“ Amy reached out to me to let me know how much Jill enjoyed her time in my chair. The truth is, I counted down the days until Jill was in my chair again. Sometimes she walked into my salon with her vibrant smile that lit up the room, sometimes she walked in sick from her treatments. Either way, she she had a contagious faith in her Savior. She knew with her whole heart that God had a plan for her life. I am honored to be able to say that one of the small pieces of that plan included me. Jill showed me perspective even when any wife and mom's worse fear comes to life happens, God is still good. Jill had to change her way of thinking, day by day, don't take a minute for granted. I loved hearing all the small and big joys in her life and how the Lord provided for her and her family every single time there was a need. Every time she walked out of my salon I would run to the backroom in tears, praying I would get to see her at her next scheduled appointment, sometimes my tears would come before she left and we would cry together in the foyer of my salon, I would tell her, keep doing those treatments, I will keep praying and I WILL see you at your next appointment. The last time I got to see Jill was early May, our last appointment together before our family moved out of state. She was my hardest goodbye. I am so thankful for those few hours I got to spend with Jill every few months. Who knew someone could make such a big impact on someone with such little time spent. But Jill did, if you knew Jill, you wouldn't be surprised to hear this. Love and miss you Jill ❤️
