“ We could not have had a better neighbor for 25 years. Malcome and Dori were family to us and always enjoyed Malcomes sense of humor and practical jokes. If we were outside working, he would come out and talk over the fence. He always had a cigar in his mouth and would spit on our dogs. I remember the time you borrowed our tractor, which we told you brakes did not work well. When you started down your driveway, I recall a few choice words on your part about the brakes!!! Malcome you touched every person you met and you will always have a special place in our hearts. Dori, does Malcome still have his cornstarch? Good memories, Rick and Sharon Nieman

“ What a great neighbor and friend. One of my favorite memories was just after we bought the property across the creek from Malcome. We made a makeshift bridge to get our tractors over to each others property to help with whatever project we had going on. One summer day my family was clearing brush and the boys were off playing and discovering as kids do. Mike, the youngest at 5, had wandered off over the bridge and we found him at Malcome's. He must have smelled that Yvonne had baked some chocolate chip cookies and enjoyed them with milk. Malcome, just a couple of weeks ago, had reminded me of that. When I started building my house in 1985 Malcome was always there helping stand up walls and pounding nails. In later years he was not able to get around as well, so he would ride his riding lawnmower over to see what I was banging on. We would talk about his and Dory's travels and boy could he tell a story. The last several years Malcome wasn't able to plow snow like he used to so I would plow my driveway and then head over to his an Dory's place. He must have seen me coming, because he would be out on the sidewalk hat, coat, gloves and some (tire chain) overshoes on, with his cane in one hand and shovel in the other. He was a very proud man and I'm sure he was thankful for the help he received. Malcome you are welcome by my campfire any times. See ya on the other side. Rick Coggins

Condolences to Dori and family. I knew Malcome since I was a kid in Belgrade, MT back in the 1950s. He was a cowboy from the get go, working at the CA ranch and competed in the old Montana Rodeo Association. He was always full of laughter and had a kind heart. Always enjoyed his visits and the hilarity of watching him teach my daughter and niece how to cheat at poker. May he be reunited in God's kingdom with his cowboy friends.
