“ Steel gray river. Cold blue skies. Autumn leaves beneath our feet. Marty smiled and took my hand. "Life is too short to walk fast," she told me.

On this day, like so many others, we had a beet sandwich, a carrot salad, and a cup of tea at the little cafe at the foot of Fifth Street before going home. Marty loved to walk. We often roamed the neighborhoods together--always bringing along a plastic grocery bag so we could pick up the candy wrappers and paper coffee cups that folks had discarded along the street. Our outings were especially eventful if we found a bit of change on the sidewalk.

Once, Marty pocketed both a penny and a quarter!!

I shared many happy times with my dear friend, Marty, and she supported me through some hard ones as well. Those who loved her will miss her many kindnesses.

*With thoughts and prayers to her family,
Teresa*
