“ Always looked for Mr. Woods' columns on community life and anything else he felt like commenting on and always came away invigorated and encouraged. Priceless actions to share and provide to fellow citizens. He seemed to have his heart and soul on the pulse of what mattered. I will always regret not having the good fortune to cross his path but was just passing through his area in recent years. I am hoping all young journalists will reflect on the great contribution he made to excellent journalism serving the best interests of residents.

“ Wilf was an amazing man... an inspiration for how to live one's life. His commitment to making his community better will always be remembered. But in addition, I will always remember his contributions to the Washington State Centennial celebration: an insightful, enthusiastic member of the statewide commission, the songbook committee, the Winter Games host city committee, arts committee and more. His guidance and support of all who were involved made it a memorable success.
